

What Is Fixed Wire Testing?

Fixed Wire Testing can also be known as Periodic Electrical Inspection and Testing. This is how you can determine that all electrical wiring, controls, outlets and accessories within a building or place of work are safe to use.

Why Have Fixed Wire Testing Carried Out?

At all times you need to ensure to the best of your ability that your premises are electrically safe for use by your staff and members of the public.

The Electricity at Work Regulations 1989 requires that: you shall provide, so far as reasonably practicable, for:

- The safety of persons and livestock against the effects of electric shock and burns, in accordance with regulation 130-01.
- Protection against damage to property by fire and heat arising from an installation defect.
- Confirmation that the installation is not damaged or deteriorated so as to impair safety.
- The identification of installation defects and non-compliance with the requirements of the regulations which may give rise to danger.

By carrying out fixed wire testing it is possible to greatly prolong the life of your electrical installation and therefore potentially save you money in the long term.

All Insurance Companies and Landlords have a duty of care to request a copy of your current electrical certificates, failure to provide these could void your insurance policy.

How We Can Help

At Best Electrical all of our fixed wire testing is carried out by our fully qualified engineers.

All of our engineers are employed directly and we operate a strict no sub-contractor policy.

We can bespoke a fixed wire testing package to suit almost all requirements, ensuring minimal disruption to your day to day business. From 20% a year over 5 years to 100%.

What Does It Cost?

Fixed wire testing can be carried out for as little as £9.75 per circuit depending on volume of circuits and at what time they are carried out. Our price includes full certification supplied in paper, electronic or CD formats. Should there be the need for any remedial works then a free fully comprehensive quotation shall be provided.
